Other Agreements

In the event that an Originator uses a Third Party Sender (as such terms are defined in the NACHA Rules) to facilitate ACH transfers from, or to the Originator, through us, the Originator and Third Party Sender shall have entered into appropriate agreements, subject to review and approval by us in the exercise of our absolute discretion, in which: (i) the Third Party Sender shall agree: (a) to be bound by the NACHA rules in effect from time to time; (b) that it shall not facilitate or undertake an ACH transfer that violates the laws of the United States; and, (c) that it shall indemnify us against any losses we may suffer as a result of ACH transfers made by the Third Party Sender; and, (ii) the Originator shall agree: (x) to assume the responsibilities of an Originator under the NACHA rules; (y) that it shall not facilitate or undertake an ACH transfer that violates the laws of the United States; and, (z) that it shall indemnify us against any losses we may suffer as a result of ACH transfers made by the Originator or Third Party Sender for its benefit. In any event, such agreements shall provide that we are a third party beneficiary thereto. After review of such agreements by us, if we believe that such agreements are inadequate to: (i) evidence the relationship of the parties; (ii) provide for the parties' agreement to be bound by the NACHA rules; or, (iii) provide for adequate indemnity of us against any losses that arise as a result of ACH transfers initiated by the Originator through the use of a Third Party Sender or by the Third Party Sender for the benefit of an Originator, we shall require, and the party entering into this relationship with us shall cause, the Originator and the Third Party Sender to amend such agreements to conform with these provisions
